FACILITIES, GENERAL.

The facility must be constructed of such material and of such strength as appropriate for the animals involved. The indoor housing facilities shall be structurally sound and shall be maintained in good repair to protect the animals from injury and to contain the animals.

At least 2 sections of the ceiling paneling are no longer secured to the interior roof of the transport enclosure. One section of loose paneling is directly over the front of the kangaroos' enclosure. The other section is located above the middle of the enclosure. It is possible for nails and/or the joint trim to fall into the enclosure causing harm to the kangaroos. Loose sections of paneling must be secured to maintain structural strength and to protect the kangaroos from injury.

To be corrected by: APRIL 25, 2003

NOTE:

Exhibitors should maintain records or forms which document the acquisition, ownership, lease, sale, transportation, disposition, and the veterinary medical care for the animals.

Records for animals traveling with the exhibit should be maintained and available for inspection by APHIS officials.

The current Program of Veterinary Care is dated 4-23-02. The program must be reviewed, updated, initialed and dated by both the facility and the attending veterinarian on an annual basis.
